

BRUCE DICKINSON

LEAD SINGER OF IRON MAIDEN, BUSINESS ANGEL, SUSTAINABLE ENTREPRENEUR AND CREATIVE BUSINESS THINKER

Bruce Dickinson is the lead singer of Iron Maiden, a commercial pilot, brew master, entrepreneur and creative business thinker. Bruce was a pilot and Marketing Director for Astraeus Airlines, a company which leased aircraft to other carriers.

Bruce is also the man behind the company Cardiff Aviation which specialises in heavy maintenance of Airbus and Boeing commercial aircraft.

Bruce is also involved in an air ship venture to manufacture lighter than air hybrid transport aircraft and Pouncer, the incredible edible drone developed by Windhorse Aerospace, that will safely fly humanitarian aid into hard to access disaster areas.

Bruce hasn't stopped flying Boeing 757s, and in 2016 flew the band around the globe on their "Book of Souls" world tour in their own 747.

Bruce is very keen to speak on his projects tying it in with business start-up, entrepreneurship and business creativity. In addition, he is willing to talk about the parallels between his music and business careers. He is also able to deliver team building experiences focused around his flight simulator.

With a captivating style, humour and wisdom, Bruce Dickinson's presentations entertain and motivate audiences.